GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF NORTH CAROLINA SESSION 2009

Η

1

HOUSE BILL 1698* Corrected Copy 5/14/10

Short Title:	Update Long-Term Care Statutes. (Public)
Sponsors:	Representatives Farmer-Butterfield, Pierce, Weiss, England (Primary Sponsors); Adams, M. Alexander, Earle, Fisher, Gill, Hughes, Spear, R. Warren, and Whilden.
Referred to:	Aging, if favorable, Ways and Means/Broadband Connectivity.

May 13, 2010

A BILL TO BE ENTITLED

2	AN ACT TO UPDATE AND CLARIFY NORTH CAROLINA'S GENERAL STATUTES ON
3	OLDER ADULTS AND LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS, AS
4	RECOMMENDED BY THE NORTH CAROLINA STUDY COMMISSION ON AGING.
5	Whereas, the North Carolina General Assembly is committed to having North
6	Carolina recognized as a leader in supporting long-term services and supports; and

7 Whereas, the State is building on the following federal and State supported person-centered initiatives: aging and disability resource centers or Community Resource 8 Connections for Aging and Disabilities, evidence-based health promotion, caregiver supports 9 10 for persons with Alzheimer's disease, lifespan respite programs, consumer-directed care, transitional care, and promotion of community living for persons who might otherwise become 11 Medicaid eligible if placed in a skilled nursing facility: Now, therefore, 12

13 The General Assembly of North Carolina enacts:

SECTION 1. Part 14A, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as 14 15 rewritten: 16

"Part 14A. Policy Act for the Aging. Older Adults.

"§ 143B-181.3. Statement of principles. Older adults findings; policy. 17

To utilize effectively the resources of our State, to provide a better quality of life for our 18 19 senior citizens, and to assure older adults the right of choosing where and how they want to 20 live the following principles are hereby endorsed:

20	nve, the following principles are hereby endorsed.
21	(a)	The N	North Carolina General Assembly finds the following:
22		(1)	Older people adults should be able to live as normal a life independently as
23			possible. possible, and to live free of abuse, neglect, and exploitation.
24		(2)	Older adults should have a choice of life styles lifestyles which will allow
25			them to remain contributing members of society for as long as possible.
26		(3)	Preventive and primary health care are necessary to keep older adults active
27			and contributing members of society.
28		(4)	Sufficient opportunities for Appropriate training in gerontology and
29			geriatrics should be developed and readily available for individuals serving
30			older adults.
31		(5)	Transportation to meet daily needs and to make accessible a broad range of
32			services should be provided available so that older persons adults may
33			realize their full potential.

2

 (6) Services for older adults should be person-centered and coordinated so that all their an individual's needs can be served efficiently and efficiently efficiently, and in the least restrictive environment. (7) Information should be readily available in each county on all programs and services for older adults, elitizens and advoeacy for these services should be available in each county. Options in housing should be made available. (8) Increased employment opportunities for older adults should be made available. (9) A variety of housing options should be available in each county. Options in housing should be made available. (10) Older adults and their caregivers should have input in the planning and evaluation of programs and services for older adults, and they should have opportunities to advocate for these programs and services. Planning for programs for older eitizens should always be done in consultation with them. (11) The State should eld assist older people adults who desire to remain as independent as possible to-help-themselves—and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritter: "§ 143B-181.5. Long-term care-services and Supports." 15 the North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance: long-term eare-provision-assistance community-base dong-term eare-services and supports. 15 143B-181.5. Long-term eare-services and supports. 18 148 15 15 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16		General Assemb	oly of North Carolina	Session 2009
 (7) Information should be readily available in each county on all programs and services for older adults, eitizens and advocacy for these services should be available in each county. (8) Increased employment opportunities for older adults should be made available. (9) A variety of housing options should be available in each county. Options in housing should be made available. (10) Older adults and their caregivers should have input in the planning and evaluation of programs and services for older adults, and they should have opportunities to advocate for these programs and services. Planning for programs for older eitizens should always be done in consultation with them. (11) The State should aid assist older people adults, who desire to remain as independent as possible to help themselves- and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Long-Term-Gare-Services and Supports. *$ 143B-181.5. Long-term care services and supports. *$ 143B-181.5. Long-term eare services and supports. *$ 143B-181.5. Long-term eare-services and supports in medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require mesistance. Incommunity-based long-term eare services and supports. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require mesistance. Incommunity-based long-term eare-services and supports. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds tha	2	(6)	all their an individual's needs can be served	efficiently and
 (8) Increased employment opportunities for older adults should be made available. (9) A variety of housing options should be available in each county. Options in housing should be made available. (10) Older adults and their caregivers should have input in the planning and evaluation of programs and services for older adults, and they should have opportunities to advocate for these programs and services. Planning for programs for older cluitzens should always be done in consultation with them. (11) The State should aidways is older people adults who desire to remain as independent as possible to help themselves and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." (c) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for adults in North Carolina." (c) The State State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance "it quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." (c) The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. Iong-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provided by these informal caregivers. (c) The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the public interest would best be services to emport end early assembly finds that the public interest would best be services to evalue the provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare service and supports to complement the services to remain in the home or in the comm	i	(7)	Information should be readily available in each county or services for older adults. citizens and advocacy for these	n all programs and
 9 (9) A variety of housing options should be available in each county. Options in housing should be made available. (10) Older adults and their caregivers should have input in the planning and evaluation of programs and services for older adults, and they should have opportunities to advocate for these programs and services. Planning for programs for older eitizens should dways be done in consultation with them. (11) The State should aid-assist older people adults who desire to remain as independent as possible to help themselves and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively uilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: "Part 14B. Long-Term-Care-Services and Supports. "$143B-181.5. Long-term care-services and Supports. "$143B-181.5. Long-term care-services and Supports. "$143B-181.5. Long-term care-services or support and expansion of home and community-based long-term services on support. The primary resource for long-term eare provision assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports to complement the services (or enain) in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and ehoice-autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing degine population-popul	,	(8)	Increased employment opportunities for older adults	should be made
 (10) Older adults and their caregivers should have input in the planning and evaluation of programs and services for older adults, and they should have opportunities to advocate for these programs and services. Planning for programs for older citizens should always be done in consultation with them. (11) The State should aid assist_older people adults who desire to remain as independent as possible to help themselves- and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." (c) The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the gonulation and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. Iong-term care-services and supports. The primary resource for long-term care provision assistance complexent and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services and supports to complement the services-care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support-enable persons who need such services and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the sublic interest would best be service by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support-enable persons who need such services choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging popula)	(9)		county. Options in evaluation of programs and services for older adults, and they should have opportunities to advocate for these programs and services. Planning for programs for older citizens should always be done in consultation with them. (11) The State should aid assist_older people adults who desire to remain as independent as possible to help themselves—and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: "S143B-181.5. Long-term eare services and supports – findings, policy." The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support enable persons who need us the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare-service and support options and that such services and olderom eare policies that: The de		(10)	e	the planning and
3 opportunities to advocate for these programs and services. Planning for programs for older citizens should always be done in consultation with them. 5 (11) The State should aid-assist older people-adults who desire to remain as independent as possible to help themselves-and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. 6 It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." 7 SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: 7 "$143B-181.5. Long-term care services and supports – findings. policy. 7 The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term care-services and support and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. 8 The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be service by a broad array of long-term care-services and support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. 8 The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that as other long-term eare-service and that promote individual autonomy, dighty, and choice-autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control ove		(10)	• •
 programs for older citizens should always be done in consultation with them. (11) The State should sid assist older people-adults who desire to remain as independent as possible to help themselves and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: "Part 14B. Long-Term-Care.Services and Supports.  143B-181.5. Long-term eare-services and Supports - findings, policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision-assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare-services and supports to complement the services-care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population-population of older adults and people living with disabilitities. The G				-
 (11) The State should aid assist older people adults who desire to remain as independent as possible to help themselves and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: "Part 14B, Long-Term-Care-Services and Supports. "§ 143B-181.5. Long-term care services and supports – findings, policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision-assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services-care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare services and supports that support-enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice-autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population-population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will stabilize or				Ū
 independent as possible to help themselves and should encourage and support families in caring for their older members. (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: "Part 14B. Long-Term-Care.Services and Supports. "$143B-181.5. Long-term eare-services and supports – findings, policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. cong-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare-provision-assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare-services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly is intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that:The development and		(11)
 (b) It is the policy of the State to effectively utilize its resources to support and enhance the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: "Part 14B. Long-Term-Care-Services and Supports. "§ 143B-181.5. Long-term eare services and supports – findings, policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice-autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term care service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population-population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care policies that:The development and implementation of long term care policies that:The development and implementation of long term eare-services and supports administered by the Dep)		independent as possible to help themselves and shou
 the quality of life for older adults in North Carolina." SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: "Part 14B. Long-Term-Care.Services and Supports. *$ 143B-181.5. Long-term eare-services and supports – findings. policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare-services to support and services and supports to complement the services-care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support-enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice-autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population-population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare-service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." *$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina Genera SECTION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the General Statutes reads as rewritten: "Part 14B. Long-Term-Care-Services and Supports. "$ 143B-181.5. Long-term eare services and supports – findings, policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports hat support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare-service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." "$143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. The North Carolina General Assembly's intent				pport and enhance as rewritten: "Part 14B. Long-Term-Care.Services and Supports. $ 143B-181.5. Long-term eare services and supports – findings, policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare-service and support options and that such services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that. The development and implementation of long-term eare services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly's intent		- ·		1.0
 "Part 14B. Long-Term-Care-Services and Supports. "§ 143B-181.5. Long-term care services and supports – findings. policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision-assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services-care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare-service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." "§ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the North C			TION 2. Part 14B, Article 3, Chapter 143B of the Gen	eral Statutes reads
 "$ 143B-181.5. Long-term eare services and supports – findings. policy. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare services and supports that support_enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare service and support options become more readily available, the relative need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population-population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." "$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term eare policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term eare policies and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly		as rewritten:	"Part 14P Long Tarm Care Services and Supports
The North Carolina General Assembly finds that the aging of the population and advanced medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services_care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support-enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support_options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." * 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care policies that:The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term eare-services and other State and local agencies shall include		"8 1/3R-181 5 medical technology have resulted in a growing number of persons who require-assistance. long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term care provision-assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term care services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term care-services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice-autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term care-service and support_options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare-service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." "§ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that:The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the			· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	ation and advanced long-term services and supports. The primary resource for long-term eare provision assistance continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services-care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population-population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare-service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment."  143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care policies that:The development and implementation of long term care policies that:The development and implementation of long term care policies that:The development and implementation of long term care policies and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include continues to be the family and friends. However, these traditional caregivers are increasingly employed outside the home. There is growing demand for improvement and expansion of home and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice-autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare service and support options become more readily available, the relative need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population-population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." *§ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care policies that: The development and implementation of long term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include 				-
 and community-based long-term eare services to support and services and supports to complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare service and support options become more readily available, the relative need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." *$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include 	, complement the services care provided by these informal caregivers. The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term care service and support options become more readily available, the relative need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." *$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include)	employed outside	e the home. There is growing demand for improvement and	expansion of home
 The North Carolina General Assembly further finds that the public interest would best be served by a broad array of long-term eare-services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare-service and support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." *$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care policies that:The development and implementation of long term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include 		•	.	and supports to served by a broad array of long-term care services and supports that support enable persons who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term care service and support options become more readily available, the relative need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term care service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." *$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include who need such services to remain in the home or in the community whenever practicable and that promote individual autonomy, dignity, and choice.autonomy and dignity as these individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term care service and support options become more readily available, the relative need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term care service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." * 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care policies that: The development and implementation of long term care services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include individuals exercise choice and control over their lives. The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term eare service and support options become more readily available, the relative need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term eare service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." * 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term eare-services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include 		who need such s	ervices to remain in the home or in the community wheney	ver practicable and
The North Carolina General Assembly finds that as other long-term care_service and support_options become more readily_available, the relative_need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging_population_population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term care_service and support_options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." * 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that:The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care_services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include		_		dignity as these support options become more readily available, the relative-need for institutional care will stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term care service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." * 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: Long-term care services and other State and local agencies shall include 				care service and stabilize or decline relative to the growing aging population.population of older adults and people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term care service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." ''$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include 			• • people living with disabilities. The General Assembly recognizes, however, that institutional care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term care service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." ''$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include care will continue to be a critical part of the State's long-term care service and support options and that such services should promote individual dignity, autonomy, and a home like environment." *$ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care-services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include environment." "§ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include
 "§ 143B-181.6. Purpose and intent. It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include
It is the North Carolina General Assembly's intent in the State's development and implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows:General Assembly as follows:(1)Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include	2	environment."
 implementation of long-term care policies that: The development and implementation of policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include 			- policies for long-term services and supports should reflect the intent of the North Carolina General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include General Assembly as follows: (1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include
(1) Long-term care services and supports administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include				he North Carolina
Health and Human Services and other State and local agencies shall include			-	the Department of e		(1)

Ger	neral Assemb	bly of North Carolina Session 2009 coordinated to promote individual choice, dignity, and the highest practicable level of independence; independence.
	(2)	Home and community-based services shall be developed, expanded, or maintained in order to meet the needs of consumers in the least confusing and least restrictive manner and based on the desires of the elderly older adults, persons with disabilities, and their families; families, and others that support them.
	(3)	All services shall be responsive and appropriate to individual need and shall be delivered through a uniform and seamless system that is flexible and responsive regardless of funding source; source through the effective use of Community Resource Connections for Aging and Disabilities as they are developed throughout the State.
	(4)	Services shall be available to all elderly persons who need them but targeted primarily to the most frail, frail and needy elderly; citizens.
	(5)	State and local agencies shall maximize the use of limited resources by establishing a fee system for persons who have the ability to pay; pay.
	(6)	Institutional care Care provided in facilities shall be provided offered in such a manner and in such an environment as to promote maintenance of health and or-enhancement of the quality of life of each resident and timely discharge to a less restrictive care setting when appropriate; and appropriate.
	(7)	State health planning for institutional bed supply shall take into account increased availability of other home and community-based services options.
	(8)	In an effort to maximize the use of limited resources, State and local agencies shall invest in supports for families and other informal caregivers of persons requiring assistance.
	(9)	Emphasis shall be placed on offering evidence-based activities to promote healthy aging, prevent injuries, and manage chronic diseases and conditions.
	(10)	Individuals and families shall be encouraged and supported in planning for and financing their own future needs for long-term services and supports."
	SECT	TION 3. This act is effective when it becomes law.